MESSAGE FROM THE COOPERATIVE

A community says “thank you”

John Porter
PRESIDENT/CEO

Freedom. It is a word we hear often, but sometimes we need to be reminded of what it truly means and who made it possible.

On the morning of September 25, 2026, a bus carrying local veterans and community volunteers once again headed toward Washington, D.C., as the Holmes-Wayne Community Honor Trip began its journey to pay tribute to the local heroes who unselfishly risked it all to protect the freedoms we hold dear.

America’s story isn’t only told in history books. It’s etched into memorials, carried in memories, and lived by the veterans who answered the call to serve.

Their stories may be different. Their conflicts may be different. But their sacrifice is something they share. And while the veterans may be the heart of this journey, they are not alone. The guardians who accompany them share that same love for this country and appreciation for those who served.

What makes the Honor Trip so special, however, is that gratitude does not belong only to those who make the journey. It belongs to an entire community.

We often talk about the cooperative difference, but this trip is a powerful example of what can happen when an entire community comes together for a common purpose. From the guardians, who give their time to travel alongside these veterans, to the businesses, organizations, and individuals who contribute their resources, generosity, and support, every act of kindness helps make this journey possible. Together, they demonstrate what it means to honor those who served.

For Keith Kerns, being part of that effort is about more than giving his time. It's about a bond he shares with the very veterans he accompanies.

A veteran himself, Kerns has served as a guardian on five of the Holmes-Wayne Community Honor Trip’s eight journeys. Although he did not serve during the same era as many of the veterans who made the trip, he understands the bond that comes with raising your hand and taking that oath.

“I didn’t serve in the same era as most of these veterans, but each of us who enlisted knows what it means to give it all to our country,” Kerns said. “What I enjoy the most is hearing the stories, building the relationships, and giving back to a generation that played such a significant role in American history.”

“It's hard to put into words what it means to see people come together like this for us,” said Terry Cook, a veteran participating in this year's Honor Trip. “You don't serve because you expect something in return. You serve because you believe in your country and in what you're being asked to do. But to come home 59 years later and see people still care, to see them standing along the road, waving flags, and thanking you — it means more than people probably realize.”

For many of these veterans, the memories of their service have remained largely unspoken for years. Some may have wondered if people had forgotten, if others could truly understand, or if anyone still wanted to hear what they had experienced during such a difficult chapter in their lives. But this journey reminds them that their experiences still matter and that their stories deserve to be heard. For some, it may be the first time in years they have felt comfortable sharing those memories and knowing others are listening.

Perhaps one of the most powerful reminders of their commitment is what many of these veterans say when asked if they would do it all again. Without hesitation, their answer is “yes.” After the years away from home, the hardships endured and the sacrifices made, they would once again raise their hands and answer the call to serve. It is a testament not only to their love of country, but to a sense of duty that time has never diminished.

As the bus departed Washington D.C. on Sunday, September 27, heading toward Shreve, it carried more than memories of the memorials and monuments. The veterans returned home knowing that their community stood behind them, that their sacrifices still mattered, and that their service had not been forgotten.

And for the eighth time in eleven years, our community rallied together to make sure our heroes received the long-awaited welcome home they deserved. There are truly no words that can adequately describe what this event means. For many of these veterans, it represents the final chapter in a book that has been left unwritten for years — a chapter that brings a sense of closure and, perhaps, a happy ending after the difficult years that came before it.
